

CBC/Radio-Canada

Legal Counsel II - TOR03994

Status of Employment Regular, Full-time

Deadline Date May 12, 2013

Position based in Toronto

When you work at CBC/Radio-Canada, you're part of an inspiring, entertaining, truly Canadian organization. Each day, some of the industry's most creative minds come to work for a world leader in public broadcasting that fuels the Canadian dream, making our national broadcaster one of the country's largest cultural institutions.

As legal counsel for media law matters, Your main role will be to provide all media lines with advice on program content, particularly regarding defamation and publication bans, to protect the Corporation from lawsuits.

You will occasionally represent the Corporation before courts and administrative tribunals, and also liaise with external legal counsel on litigation cases (media law) involving the Corporation.

In addition, as a key player in the Law Department as well as on task forces or committees devoted to media and administrative law (ATI), you will advise operational areas of CBC/Radio-Canada and work with senior executives in sensitive, high-profile areas. You may be required to negotiate agreements. You must have excellent writing skills, and know how to close the deal.

We are looking for a candidate with the following:

- Member of the Ontario Bar Association for about five years
- Experience practicing media, defamation and/or copyright law (asset)
- Solid computer skills
- Fluent in English (spoken and written)
- Command of spoken French
- Excellent interpersonal skills: tact and diplomacy
- Efficient; good judgment skills; solid communication skills
- Discretion to perform all duties with complete confidentiality

Candidates may be subject to skills testing.
